A RESOLUTION

1 Creating the House Study Committee on Prepaid Telecommunications Homeland Security
2 Interests; and for other purposes.

3 WHEREAS, prepaid cellular users are reportedly expected to reach over 1.35 billion users 4 by 2009 with 59 percent of the total global wireless market; and

5 WHEREAS, there are unique concerns to prepaid cellular service including issues of user
6 anonymity inherent in the current prepaid service model which pose a threat to the security 7 of the citizens of Georgia; and

8 WHEREAS, the use of prepaid cell phones has been linked to terrorist activities, gang 9 activity, and drug dealing; and

10 WHEREAS, prepaid cell phones are notoriously hard to trace and provide a steady supply 11 of "clean" phone numbers making it difficult for law enforcement to pinpoint and keep track 12 of those engaging in drug trafficking and other illegal activities; and

13 WHEREAS, it has become public that some Al Qaeda militants used prepaid phones to 14 communicate with one another and that such phones were used in the 9/11 attack; and

15 WHEREAS, governments in other countries have taken action on this issue such as the Swiss 16 Bundesrat which requires that the personal details of all buyers be obtained and stored, the 17 government of Thailand which has made it mandatory for new prepaid phone users to 18 produce national identification cards when buying prepaid SIM cards, and the government 19 of Taiwan which allows each person only one SIM card; and

20 WHEREAS, there is no difference in how a prepaid cell phone and a regular phone operate 21 and, therefore, it is unclear why they should be sold differently or why such sales should be 22 taxed differently.
